About Lily

I graduated as a speech pathologist and audiologist in 1989 and have practised as a speech pathologist in the public and private sector. I worked at Sir Charles Gardiner Hospital for many years specialising in the assessment and management of voice disorders and other head and neck related difficulties. I currently work in private practice with a special interest in children with literacy and auditory processing difficulties. I liaise with school teachers and other professionals who are also involved in the management of my clients. I attend regular professional development events and have been involved in the organisation and education of work experience students. I am a certified practising speech pathologist and am a member of the Speech Pathology Association of Australia and the Canadian Association of Speech-Language Pathologists and Audiologists.
